Different types of maternity care: which is best for you?
In consultation with each family, we determine which type of maternity care is best suited to your wishes. This relates to the number of hours of care indicated, and of course also to your personal situation and wishes.

If everything is normal during childbirth and your baby makes a good start, the care is usually spread over 8 days. If the family situation requires extra care, you can, for example, opt for extended maternity care with additional hours for care, and support with household tasks. Incubator aftercare is also an option. When you and your baby leave the hospital, you will receive maternity care to get you started on your way.

Some women like assistance from the first contraction. We call this ‘early deployment of partus support’. The maternity nurse will stay with you and provide support from the beginning up to and including the birth, in addition to the support provided by the midwife. Geboortezorg Limburg has been offering Natural Maternity Care since 2014. This form of maternity care focuses on peace, routine, warmth and the use of natural materials.

You can also contact our in-house lactation consultant for all your questions about breastfeeding. This is a professionally trained breastfeeding specialist.

During the initial meeting, all possibilities are discussed and you can make a well-considered choice. You will also find all the options on our website.

Quality
The maternity nurses at Geboortezorg Limburg are professionally trained and work according to fixed protocols. They are registered with the national Maternity Care knowledge centre. You, therefore, have the guarantee that you’ll be getting a healthcare professional at home. The care is carried out according to an individual care plan in which your family is, of course, the priority.

Geboortezorg Limburg is in possession of the International ‘Breastfeeding Care’ certificate from the World Health Organisation (WHO) and Unicef. The organisation is also in possession of the ISO quality certificate.

Maternity care costs
The reimbursed costs depend on your insurance. Read your policy conditions carefully or ask your health insurer. The rate for an hour of maternity care is agreed annually with the various health insurers. You also pay a personal contribution per hour. This amount is determined annually by insurers and the government. For more information check our website.
